

The two strong men went to bring the boy. They found him in his mother's lodge, sitting on a bbbbb berskin robe. They told him:

"We come to take you to your father." The boy made no reply. They spoke again: "You understand what we say! You better do it! We eill take you any how!"

They grab him, both of them. They ca/n not move him! He crack-ed the bones in the arms of both men. They went home, arms broken. When they got there they told the Chief: "We can not bring the boy. He is powerful! We have no arms now!"

The Chief sent more men; lots of canoes. They had no horses. When they got there ~~they~~ the mother had on a ceremonial cap. All colors. If you look at ~~it~~ her cap you drop dead. ^{She a woman.} ~~It was~~ powerful. Whbbbbb ~~all killed in that way~~ ~~By~~ The men were all killed.

The boy then carried a rock that many men together could not carry. He carried it a short distance, and sat it down. It can be seen to this day on bank of the eNche Wana(2) between the Cascades, and Hood River. It is known as Castle Rock.

Original the property of Washington State University Libraries. No reproduction without permission.

({)Wishom name of Hood River. Dito, Klikatat Low-la Pum. "people place."

()"big river."; applied in general to the Columbia River.